In February, we celebrate Black History Month as an opportunity to understand Black history and spotlight achievements. How are you being more intentional in your diversity, equity, and inclusion strategy, especially around the Black experience? How are you ensuring these intentions and conversations move beyond the month of February?

We encourage you to discover the Diversity Abroad resources that recognize the Black experience in global education. We’ve pulled a few for you to explore below!

Identity Abroad Series: Black Student Experiences in Europe

Students will share how their Black identity may have influenced their experiences studying and working in Europe. You will also learn about a variety of resources available for students interested in pursuing a global experience in Europe.

We Need Your Input!

Do you work with US university students studying abroad in Europe? Diversity Abroad’s Global Inclusion Community of Practice in Europe would like your help.

We are conducting a brief survey for onsite staff in Europe on their experience providing student support relating to issues of diversity, equity and inclusion to US university students. If this is relevant to your work, please take this short survey and share with others in your network. Your responses will help inform a Diversity Abroad community discussion this Spring 2023.
